Western General Electric Co., Ltd. MOTOR SERVICE.

The time is now come when this Company is prepared to furnish power for all purposes, great and small, by means of Electric Motors. These Motors are so low in cost, occupy so little space, are so easily controlled, and are so exceedingly economical in operation that their use will be practically universal as soon as people understand the matter. There is scarcely a home, or a place of business, in which electric power cannot be used to lighten and cheapen labor. Inquiries solicited.

Dominion Day.

Celebration in Red Deer.

Splendid weather greeted the citizens of Red Deer on Monday, the 40th anniversary of confederation.

From early morning farmers and ranchers flocked to town from many miles around, and the streets were lined with interested spectators by ten o'clock.

The Trades Procession, formed up in front of the market square, about eleven o'clock, in the following order:

Marshall, Fire Chief Meers,
Mayor, H. H. Gaetz, in buggy.
Olde Brass Band,
Chemical engine, driver North
and crew,
Hose reel with fireman McDougall holding it down.

Fire Department,
F. Michener & Co., float, meat
shop in full operation,
H. G. Stone, "Signs" float, men with ladder.

Advocate "Going to Press" in a buggy.

Springbett & Bowhey, Frost &
Wood binder.

Michener, Carscallen & Co., the land people, M. A. Munro in charge.

Ilsey Bros., hardware house float.

Brown's Pharmacy, Red Cross
ambulance in charge of doctor and four bearers.

Staples Lumber Company, green brush float.

Wallace & Gaetz, clown on horseback representing "pants".

Other clowns.
Numerous vehicles, etc.

ALEXANDRA PARK

One of the largest crowds ever seen in Red Deer assembled at the park in the afternoon to witness the events on the programme as laid out by the sports committee. The grand stand was crowded and the good natured assemblage occupied every nook and corner of the grounds and railing along the track. The Olde brass band played several selections.

Messrs. Murphy and Jarvis had stands on the grounds and were kept busy handing out ice cream lemonade, fruit and other refreshments, while the Ladies of the Presbyterian church were kept busy in the Agricultural hall serving lunches and refreshments. The crowd was good natured and took keen interest in everything that was going on, but it was impossible to take in the whole show as several contacts were going on at the same time.

THE FOOTBALL GAMES.

Four teams entered for the football prizes of $55 and $25, namely, Pine Lake, Olde Horn Hill, Red Deer.

Pine Lake and Horn Hill started play and at half time neither team had scored. In the second half Horn Hill scored one and the game ended 1-0 in favor of Horn Hill. Pine Lake was short several good players who were unable to attend. The playing of Rev. Greaves, of Pine Lake, team was one of the fine features of the game.

Red Deer and Olde next played and neither team had scored when time was up. Ten minutes was given for another toss.

In the next ten minutes Olde scored and won the game 1-0.

Olde and Horn Hill then played for first and second place and Olde scored one goal in the first half and another in the second and won 2-0 over their plucky opponents.

BASBALL.

Only two teams entered for the baseball prizes, namely, Lacombe and Red Deer, the home team leading by nine runs, the score standing 12-3 in their favor at the close.

M. A. Munro refereed the game while Percy Cottingham acted as official scorer.

The Red Deer team were Rasmus
P. Peterson, O. Richards, I.
Northey, B. Sawyer, B. Mann, H.
Hanford, H. D. Brazier, C. D.
Loiselle, making a strong amateur organization hard to beat.

THE HORSE RACES.

As usual the horse races were a strong feature of the days sport and created the greatest interest.

The first and most exciting was the half mile pony running race best two in three, some six entries being made, the result was

Chris White's Pinto 1st.
Roy Fleming's Nook 2nd.
W. Bryan's Bay Billy 3rd.

The open half-mile dash resulted in Joe Walton's Dook 1st.
Dr. Sawyer's Ringwood 2nd.
W. Bryan's Katie B. 3rd.

The half mile Indian race resulted in Northwest winning first place.

The half mile local trot was won by G. W. Ball's Nellie Emmett, Dr. Sawyer's Mischanee taking second.

A match race between Ball's
Nellie Emmett, Dr. Sawyer's
Mischanee, and Hoskins Airolo, resulted in the horses coming in in the order named.

FIREMEN'S SPORTS.

Owing to there being no visiting firemen teams present the local team gave an exhibition race against time in the dry test hose reel race and succeeded in lowering their splendid time at Calgary by 21.5 seconds, completing the race in 36.45 seconds, with a man short on the team.

The ladder race brought out two teams. The winning team was composed of A. Handford, Coglin, Smith, Martin and Bawtinheimer, in 18.35 seconds.

Bawtinheimer and Martin won the coupling contest, time 33 seconds.

The novelty race resulted in Martin taking first and Bawtin-heimer second.

One hundred yard fireman's race was won by E. Smith, A.
Hanford second.

The dummy rescue was won by
O. Snider with R. Cullum second.

ATHLETICS

Garden Party.

The annual garden party of the hospital ladies' aid association was held at the residence of Mr.
William Postill on Thursday evening last. The evening was an ideal one for an outdoor festival and the receipts showed a surplus above expenses of about $115. A pleasant time was enjoyed by those present. The ladies desire to thank Mrs. Postill for the use of the grounds and all who assisted during the evening.

The ladies also wish to thank Dominion Meat Co., Mrs. Panruoker, Miss Brisbin, Mr. F. Michener,
Mr. Mitchell, Mr. Jos. Brumpton,
Messrs. Ross and Morris and Dr.
George for assistance during the evening. Ladies may get their dishes at Mrs. McLeod's.

Hospital Donations.

Donations to the Memorial Hospital since our last issue are as follows:—Mrs. McBryne, oak stand and dresser; H.H. Humber, repairing 8-day clock; A. B.
Nash, out flowers; Mr. Cole, rhubarb; Ladies' Aid, lemons, tea and coffee, dozen sheets and yellow slips; Mrs. Bryan, buttermilk.

The Crops.

Never have crops in the Red Deer district grown so fast as the present year, and never have they looked better. Everything gives promise of a bumper harvest, far the best in the history of the country. Everything points to an earlier harvest than usual.

DEPARTMENTAL EXAMINATIONS.

The mid-summer examinations are being held this week at the Public School with Principal Smith, of Calgary, as presiding official.

The public school leaving examinations were held last week.
Principal McLean presiding.
Twelve pupils wrote. The papers were very fair except grammar, and perhaps literature, the grammar was particularly hard. A strong protest has been registered in consequence.

The departmental examinations started yesterday and will be on all week.

Last week the report that Mrs.
W. Bond of Solihema was dead was not correct. It proved to be Mrs. Mike Lamarch, formerly a Miss Bond, who was married to Mr. Lamarch last fall. There was no cause for an inquest, death resulting from natural causes. Mrs. Lamarch was buried at Horn Hill Tuesday of last week.

A little daughter of Chief Rothnie, while playing in the Fire Hall yesterday morning, fell from the upper floor through the mah-hole to the hall below. She was picked up unconscious and remained in a dazed state for some time, but no bones were broken and she will be all right in a few days.

A reception was tendered Rev.
Mr. Huestis on Wednesday evening last by the congregation of the Methodist church. Mr. E.
Michener occupied the chair and addresses were delivered by Messrs. Cowell and G. W. Smith and refreshments were served by the ladies. A short program was rendered by members of the congregation and a pleasant time was enjoyed by those present.

Miss Black, residing in town,
received a telegram on Saturday, announcing the death of her brother, David Black by drowning in Montana. The family reside near Hilldown, and came to Alberta about two years ago from Scotland. Deceased leaves a young wife in Scotland, who was about to join him.

EYES ON CANADA.

The English investor seems to have made up his mind that Canada's growth will be continuous and increasing. He evidently believes that this will continue to be about the most prosperous part of the Empire. We in Canada have plenty of need for foreign funds for investment here, and we would prefer to have the money come from our own kin, who will run no chance of loss but will have on the contrary, a certainty of profit.

The Finance News, which is the most prominent newspaper of its kind in Great Britain, the other day printed the views of a well known English broker, who had spent three months in this country examining into its prospects and development. This gentleman said:

The extraordinary prospect enjoyed by the Dominion during the past two years and the growing conviction that the country will witness immense progress in the immediate future have naturally attracted the attention of capitalists to Canada as a field for investment. Unfortunately the astute Yankee was early in the field; but of late, business men in the old country have been walking up to the potential of profitable employment of money in the Dominion, with the result that many enterprises which might otherwise have been financed from America are now obtaining the backing they want at home.

Undoubtedly Canada offers a good field for investment. Our new commercial companies are as a rule free from any wild out features such as are to be found in other young countries. There is plenty of room for Canadian capital, and plenty for British capital. The Canadian who sends his money away to a foreign commercial or financial institution is injuring himself and his country. Canada's men have ceased to drift away from their native land, and Canada's money should stay here to work for Canadians instead of aliens.

When Liberal organs state there is no Conservative party left in Alberta they forget that forty per cent of the votes polled in the last provincial election were Conservative votes although we were only successful in electing two members.

THE CALL OF THE WILD.

The Nelson Daily News says: "There is renewed talk in political circles of the return of Hon. Clifford Sifton to the cabinet. It is rumored that he may be induced to accept the portfolio of Public Works."

When the matter is seriously considered, it is to be believed that Hon. Clifford might, not may, be induced to accept any portfolio in any cabinet. The Winnipeg Telegram remarks that Mr. Sifton has an accepting habit that was only restrained when he was bundled out of the Dominion government, and the administration of northwest lands was given into other hands, and Yukon concessions existed only in golden dreams of the past, and he might very readily be induced to re-enter the Laurier government if Sir Wilfrid Laurier and public opinion would permit.

Mr. Sifton would probably prefer the Public Works department. The Public Works department offers opportunities that the ex-minister of the interior, with his peculiar talents, could undoubtedly administer with perfect satisfaction—to himself. Phenomenal exploitation has gone from the Yukon, which has settled down to business along regular lines, and the Interior Department requires to be fostered and nursed for a few years before it is worth while for a man of Mr. Sifton's talents. The Public Works Department ought to satisfy Mr. Sifton for a year or two.

The Sifton boom is beginning. Whisper is heard in the despatches from London, England, where Mr. Sifton's court dress is vaunted before the world, and now over the snow-capped peaks of the Rockies comes the statement that "it is rumored that he may be induced to accept the portfolio of Public Works."

'Tis a long way from London to Nelson, B. C., but the outposts of a fortress have to be captured before the citadel is entered. Sir Wilfrid will have to double the sentries, for Hon. Clifford Sifton is publishing himself back into public life by the Court circular of St. James, and the press of the mining towns of British Columbia.

No better answer could be made to the slanderous statements made against the Conservative party by Liberal papers than the grand turn out at the convention last Thursday from all parts of the Province.

The logging and lumbering industries on the coast to-day are facing the most serious crisis of recent years, and if the situation is to be saved, if the present high market for lumber is to be upheld, over a million dollars will have to be produced right away to take care of the over-production of logs.

The Conservative party have no cause to be afraid after taking stock of the splendid gathering of stalwarts from every part of the west, in the Oddfellow's Hall last Thursday and Friday.

Sir Frederick Treves, the King's favorite physician, frequently startles the public by his frank utterances of bright paradoxes. It was he who called a crowd of "nurses" who flocked to South Africa out of love of sensation and advertisement, "the plague of women." Speaking at the opening of an isolation hospital, he observed that the time was not far distant when the bottles on doctors' shelves would be reduced to a very small number. Resort would be had to simple living, simple diet, and plenty of sun and fresh air. He looked forward to the time when people would leave off the extraordinary habit of taking medicine when they were sick.

Referring to the discoveries in bacteriological science and the great results achieved in the reduction of the mortality from infectious diseases, Sir Frederick said that he looked forward to the time when it would be as anomalous for persons to die of scarlet fever, typhoid, cholera, and diphtheria, as it would be a man to die of a wolf's bite in England.

What is a Man?

"All the constituents of a 150-pound man are contained in 1,200 eggs," said the chemist. "There is enough gas in a man," he went on, "to fill a gasometer of 3,649 cubic feet. There is enough iron to make four nails. There is enough fat to make seventy-five candles and a large cake of soap. There is enough phosphorus to make 8,064 boxes of matches. Furthermore, that man who is aeronautical will be pleased to know that there is enough hydrogen in him to fill a balloon and carry him up to the clouds."

"The remaining constituents of a man would yield, if utilized, six cruets of salt, a bowl of sugar and ten gallons of water."

At the Complaint Desk.

—By KATE AUSTIN.

For the third time Marian Macrae rose from the uncomfortable settee that faced the complaint desk and approached the young woman, seated behind the wide window, who was talking to the

Of course it gave her a good chance to let us all know what nice white arms she has, but my mother 'd see me in my grave before she'd let me go to a ball in any such costume as that."

"What's your name and what's wrong with the bundle?" inquired the girl in bored tones.

"You may name twice and telephone the delivery department, and I am waiting for their report. Why do you not call again and see whether the parcel has been sent?"

"Say, do you think I want to get the delivery boys down on me? If they did it, they'd tell me quick enough."

"Well, I'll take your name and address and drop you a postal when we find it."

"Indeed, you will not. I want it," said Marian, and she walked away from the window with head high and nostrils quivering.

"Wonder if she's going down into the sub-basement to get it," giggled the young person to the checker. "It is funny how some fellows think they can come in here and run this store. I guess she doesn't know we've got a system here."

Then while the girl continued her account of the fancy dress ball Marian crossed to the main aisle, found a florist and asked to be directed to the superintendent of the employees. Five minutes later she was ushered into the presence of a smooth faced, square shouldered chap who looked as if he had received his training on the football gridiron rather than as stock boy in a big department store.

Richard Burnside had risen from the lowest rank in the store where he was now superintendent, studying practical business methods by day and physical culture and English literature at night. He stood beside his desk, Marian Macrae's card bent between his fingers. He looked at the slender, graceful figure of the girl, and a man accustomed to seeking good work for his staff and decided that she must be reported as a magnificent specimen of the working girl. He had met many such since he had become superintendent.

"What can we do for you, Miss Macrae?" he inquired, offering her a seat.

atmosphere was beginning to assert itself. There were weekly calls to the women clerks, at which reports from doorwalkers and complaining customers were offered; little lectures on the smoothing out of tangles and the adjustment of differences were given. The sales girls took a new view of selling goods and handling customers, and none knew how to handle a customer in a charming little up-town apartment, where the superintendent and the head of the complaint department gravely discussed the problems while the invalid mother forgot her own pains in listening to the new interests of her daughter.

Then came the great day when James Barnes, Sr., returned from his trip around the world. Richard Burnside had no need to give account of his stewardship. Others had done so in letters that encircled the globe, and so one bright spring morning the head of the house sat in his superintendent's office saying the sort of things that warm an employee's heart when there came a tap at the door, and a girl with soft brown hair and eyes entered the office, her hands filled with report slips.

"Mr. Barnes, I want you to know Miss Macrae, the very capable."

"What's your name and what's wrong with the bundle?" inquired the girl in bored tones.

"You may name twice and telephone the delivery department, and I am waiting for their report. Why do you not call again and see whether the parcel has been sent?"

"Say, do you think I want to get the delivery boys down on me? If they did it, they'd tell me quick enough."

"Well, I'll take your name and address and drop you a postal when we find it."

"Indeed, you will not. I want it," said Marian, and she walked away from the window with head high and nostrils quivering.

"Wonder if she's going down into the sub-basement to get it," giggled the young person to the checker. "It is funny how some fellows think they can come in here and run this store. I guess she doesn't know we've got a system here."

AERIAL NAVIGATION.

—By G. L. Smith.

Now the Flying Machines. Prices aggregating many thousands of dollars for the production of a flying machine of the "heavier than air" variety, offered by English and French aviators, have caused great activity and have been the subject of much of the most prominent aeronautic experts predict that the year just begun will be marked by remarkable advances in the science and practice of aerial flight. To the gasoline engine and to the extraordinary mechanical progress made in automobilism is due the hope that something definite and worthy may be achieved by those who seek to solve the problem of aerial traveling.

The ordinary balloon, it is agreed, has little practical value save as an exciting form of sport and for purposes of observation in the hands of the stranger, anything like a stiff breeze it is the sport of the winds and quite useless from a practical point of view. Better things are being done by the use of dirigibles utilizing both the gas bag and the gasoline engine. Six years ago Santos-Dumont was able to steer an airplane, and since that time the dirigible, running with and against the wind, since that time hundreds of dirigibles have been built and are now nearly as common as the spherical gas bag. Nevertheless it is realized that these are far from perfect and the solution of the problem of practical navigation of the air. They have, in fact, only stimulated the desire for something better.

The mechanical difficulties in the way of producing a perfectly dirigible machine are many and the number of contingencies that must be provided for in traveling through such a mobile and treacherous element as the air. Machines that are based upon the principle of the dirigible are based upon the principle of the dirigible.

IS IT SHAKESPEARE?

—By G. L. Smith.

Painting Discovered in Old Inn Said to Be of Author. Portrait for Years Has Hung in Village Hostelry Declared by Visitor to Be Immortal Bard, Made When He Was a Youth—Bears Date of 1688—Poss Similar to That in "Welcome."

Great interest has been aroused by the discovery of what may turn out to be the earliest known portrait of Shakespeare. For many years it hung among a collection of sporting prints in the bar parlour of the Bridgewater Arms, an inn in the village of Winsford, near Darlington. No special value was attached to it until a stranger, who knew something about old pictures, chanced to see it.

He noticed that the resemblance to other supposed authentic portraits of Shakespeare painted when he had reached a more mature age. He said that it might be a portrait of the immortal bard. In the month of June "might be" became "was," and M. H. Spielmann, the famous art critic, now engaged in preparing a book on Shakespeare's portraits, heard of it, and wrote to the Misses Ludgate—two maiden sisters who control the inn where the picture hangs—photograph of the portrait, and its history as far as they were acquainted with the history of the picture.

MONEY IN HOGS.

—By G. L. Smith.

Breeding of Pigs a Profitable Experiment if Worked Properly. At present there are more money in hogs than there was a few years ago. The raising of hogs, like every other business, requires brains, not in the man of the farm, but in the man of the city. Of course there are many who raise hogs for the market, but the only way you could get it to be a success is to raise hogs for the market.

WHITE PINE.

—By G. L. Smith.

Undoubtedly the Best Tree for Planting in Ontario. White pine is undoubtedly the tree to be preferred above all others for planting in Ontario. It is a wood so generally useful and so acceptable to woodworkers of almost all kinds that a ready market will always be secured for it.

EXPENSES OF GOVERNMENT.

—By G. L. Smith.

Some very interesting items appear in the Imperial Government accounts for the year ending March 31, 1906, which were issued recently. The accounts include Parliamentary grants for Civil Service, Education, and other departments, including postoffice, packet and telegraph services. The total amount amounted to £25,287,502, but the expenditure was kept well within bounds, the surplus being £1,804,000.

THE FARM-NEEDS SHEEP.

The Agricultural Epitomist recently published the following article from the pen of Gilbert Allen, and we thought our readers would be interested by its reproduction.

"Sheep are oftentimes spoken of as a nuisance by some people, but wise land owners give them credit as being great renovators of fertility, but distributors of it, if it were needed, if given an opportunity. Though sheep are adverse to water and always seek an elevation for their resting place, they like the succulent growth, even though it be weeds, found in a lowland of a field or pasture which has been enriched by the washings from the higher surrounding land.

These two peculiarities of sheep once came under my particular observation. I turned some sheep into a clover field and they at once sought out the spots where the clover did not catch and eagerly devoured any weeds or pigweed grass that had taken possession of the spaces. They then sought the weeds and succulent grass in the low places and runs in the fields, leaving the clover on the high land where most needed to enrich the soil, untouched, only touching this grass when practically everything else had been eaten.

More than this, when night came the sheep sought the higher portion of the field for their resting places and their droppings there deposited the fertility gathered during the day from the lower lands, thus conveying through the process of nature and cultivation. A farm upon which sheep are kept ought to be not only fertile, but also evenly fertile which is a much desired condition.

Farms are very few which cannot with profit keep sheep." In our own particular district we should very much like to see sheep farming more largely practised than it is, as we possess some ideal grazing land suited to the purpose. One of the chief draw backs however to the rearing lambs is the coyote and this marauder is becoming so bold and numerous in the Province that it is high time the authorities granted a bounty on them. In addition to their depredations amongst young stock, they are in a great measure responsible for the scarcity of prairie chicken and partridge and it is hard times on the legitimate sportsman that he should be debarred from shooting them until the 1st of October, 1908.

Coyotes in addition to killing the young birds destroy a tremendous number of eggs in the nesting season. If the government put a bounty of $2 per head on coyotes it would have the effect of thinning out these "vermin" and greatly tend to the increase of game in the country.

RAISING DRAFT HORSES.

Some Points As to Best Methods of Treating the Colts.

Draft horses are raised for the purpose of drawing heavy loads. To produce the ideal draft horse we seek to combine as much bone, muscle, weight and action as possible with a smooth, well proportioned conformation. To secure this in its perfection there must be no check in the colt's early growth and development. Whether draft or trotter, the first year's development is all important, and the draft colt should be pushed till it is two years old to attain its best development.

To begin with, we must have the right inheritance of the qualities we hope to produce. The colt must be bred right. But the richest inheritance of prize winning blood may be neglected or improperly fed and care produce an ill shapen plug, fit for no special purpose whatever. To attain the development to which the colt's inheritance entitles it, it must be kept growing from the start.

The draft colt should not be weaned early, but should be kept on its dam and by that time he should be eating so well that he will not be noticeably affected by the loss of his dam's milk.

Method Used After Weaning. It is after the colt is weaned that many breeders fail in their management. The mare's milk will usually keep the colt growing fairly well on a good pasture, and it is usually the second period—after the colt is weaned.

A PERCHERON CHAMPION.

(Canadian Champion Percheron mare at International Live Stock Exposition, 1906.) ed—that its development is checked by the critical time. During this time it should have everything that is good for a colt to eat. Deny it and you are lost now. Feed it all the oats, bran and shelled corn it will consume. If you have a good, make the bran portion liberal. Feed plenty of bright tame hay, good green alfalfa preferred, but cut out the prairie hay for your colts. It is a worthless ration for a growing colt and should be avoided if possible. Prairie grass during the latter end of the grazing season and prairie hay during the winter are very productive of worms in colts. During this period of the colt's life it is peculiarly liable to these pests. Before I had time hay pastures for late grazing and time hay for winter I lost several colts from this cause before I understood it. I soon learned that a teaspoonful of tartar emetic scattered over their feed for a few days was a wise precaution. It rid them of intestinal worms almost immediately, have never found any hay for a growing colt that was equal to alfalfa.

With careful feed and attention the first winter the smaller breeds of horses, like the trotters, will usually attain to a proper degree of development without a great deal of extra attention thereafter. But I have found it pays well to push the development of my draft colts during the second year. It has been my practice to feed the horse colts and sometimes fillies a light ration of grain or pasture during the second summer. One who has never tried it will be amazed at the remarkable development a draft colt will show in one summer with a very small grain ration on good pasture. I suppose oats would be recommended for this purpose by the authorities on feeding, but I have very satisfactory results with corn alone.

The colt or yearling may become untidy with the best of feed and care unless it is kept free from lice. A teaspoonful per colt of kerosene mixed with its feed and fed alternately once every other day will quickly rid the colt of lice. I use it before Draft Horse Breeders' Association.

Hard on British Boy.

The London Daily Mail recently published an article and some correspondence on the decline in popularity among boys of the sea as a career. The "Siren and Shipping" will hear nothing of the suggestion that anything is wrong with the pay or conditions of employment; on shipboard, from the officers' standpoint, "everything is lovely."

"No," remarks the "Siren," dogmatically, "the fault does not lie at the door of the shipowners. It is the result, not of poor pay or bad accommodation, but of the general degeneration of British boyhood. The old adventurous spirit is dying out; the sea no longer 'calls.' The modern youngster, with his five-a-penny cigarettes and his high collars, is horrified at the idea of 'roughing it.' He prefers the comfort of a high stool during the day and of a public house billiard room at night."

"Who ever heard of a lad—Stanley Condor excepted—running away to sea nowadays? The average 15-year-old stripling would shudder at the bare suggestion of such a thing."

Poultry Feeding.

Rice is almost valueless as a poultry feed and should never be employed. Buckwheat is very much relished by poultry. The color and shape of the kernels are strange to them at first, but once they know what they are they will leave other grain for it. Being deficient of flesh forming substance, it should only be used at intervals as a change. Potatoes should only be used when they are the refuse from the table and never alone, but mixed with some kind of meal, such as milnig—A. Y. Meers in Western Poultry Journal.

T. P. Parcels, of Horn Hill, is in the hospital again with his old trouble of an abscess located behind his right ear. Some time ago an opening was made in his skull and the galling abscess dispersed. The wound was cleaned and it healed nicely. But a short time ago the old trouble again appeared and another operation was necessary. After the old wound was opened, while it gave the patient relief, it was considered necessary for permanent recovery to clean the wound and scrape the skull. Mr. Parcels will not be able to stand this at present, and he will await until he regains strength before going through the ordeal.

Verity Plows and others.

A famous general once said "There are only two tunes. One is God save the King and the other isn't." In speaking of plows it would not be out of the way to say, "There are two kinds of plows one is the Verity and the other isn't." Verity plows are in a class by themselves, and in a class which can be depended on in all conditions. Shares and boards are made of highest grade soft centre steel, hardened by the refrigerator process, and as result bottoms are as hard as glass and will scour in any soil.

Our sovereign 18 inch breaker cannot be equalled on the market to-day for strength, lightness in draft and good work. We have sold a great many of these plows and we have a lot more to go, so come in and get a plow to do your breaking with. We give an absolute guarantee with everything we sell, and we live up to our guarantee. See this plow first.

LAND ROLLERS AND LAND PACKERS.

We have been told that the cut worm is putting in an appearance again in some localities, and we all know the damage done last year by these worms, so watch out that they do not get at your crops. One of the surest ways of getting rid of this pest is to use a roller or land packer. Several of our customers last year took this means of getting rid of the worms and they sure did it. Come in and see these rollers and packers whether you want to buy or not.

Remember our add of last week re mowers & rakes. Next week we intend to draw your attention to a few binder points.

CHAPTER III.

Two months later Andre, Vicomte de Nerac, was riding in the woods around Versailles, and, notwithstanding his debilitated noble as he might be, his heart was gay, for he was not a Captain-Lieutenant in the Chevaliers de la Garde, and a Croix de St. Louis; he was not presently about to fight again for honor and France, and he was not once more a free man and in his native land with Paris at his back. The leafless trees were just beginning to bud, though winter was still here, but the breath of spring was in the air and the gladness of summer shone in the March sun. Yes, the world had fair to be kind and good, and Andre's heart beat responsive to its call. Love and honor and France were his, and what more could a noble wish?

He let the reins drop beneath his contentment the bracing breeze, while his eyes roamed to and fro. He was not a soldier for some one, his anxious gaze up the road showed, might be expected to come from that quarter—the court of the Palace of Versailles.

Along the path walked a peasant girl, driving a magnificent spotted cow. The bell at its fat throat tinkled merrily, the sun gleamed on its glossy side, and the girl, dressed in a simple dress, sat on the noble gentleman's side, and he, too, was smiling. She was not pretty, this peasant wench, with her shock of tumbled flaxen hair tossed over her amethyst face, and her bodice and skirt were soiled and tattered, but Andre, to whom all young men were interesting, in the sheer gaiety of his heart tossed her a coin and smiled again his captivated smile.

"May Monsieur le Duc be happy in his love?" the wench said, as she got the coin before she placed it in the bodice, and Andre remarked with approval the whiteness of her teeth. If he had not been so happy, he would have been kind to her, for she was both trim and sturdy, and she walked with the easy swing of perfect health. He could have kissed her mouth, for then just because the world was so fair and he was free.

"You have a magnificent cow, my dear," he remarked.

"But, Monsieur le Duc, you call me Yvonne of the Spotted Cow, and name," she dropped her head, and Yvonne of the Spotted Ankle. I am not pretty, mol, but that matters not. My fat cow or my pretty girl, I will be a husband some day, and till then, like Monsieur le Duc, I keep a gay heart."

Whereupon she bowed her head into the cow's flanks and the two slowly passed out of sight, though the merry tinkling of the bell continued to jingle through the leafless trees long after she had disappeared.

Andre waited patiently. An hour went by, still he waited. Twice he trotted up the road and peered this way and that, but there was not a soul to be seen, and with a muttered exclamation of disgust he was about to spur away when the nobleman's horn caused him to gather up the reins sharply. And now eager expectation was written on every line of his face, and he looked at the nobleman's name galloping down the forest track.

At sight of him by the roadside she pulled up her horse and stood astounded, and Andre—"you are back?" she said, and the color flooded into her cheeks.

"Thank God, yes."

"And well?"

"Perfectly. My wounds are healed. I am a prisoner no longer, and in a fortnight I return to the Low Countries to seek revenge from the enemies and yours, Denise, the English."

Her grey eyes flashed, then dropped modestly. "You are a soldier of France, then?" she asked, the Malton de Rot soldiers worthy of the noblesse and of France. But do you not come to Versailles, then?"

"No. My company is not on duty this month at the Palace of Versailles, but I shall all be with His Majesty in Flanders."

"Yes," she answered, "I forgot."

She began to stroke her horse's neck in some embarrassment. Andre gazed at her with the hungry eyes of a lover, and stared when she said she was a soldier's horse. Neither a brunette nor a blonde, for her eyes were grey and her hair was fair and the tint of her cheeks was rosy, and she was as delicate as the tint of a tender rose. Beautiful, yes, but something much more than beautiful, a great nobility and a sure, one who saw in his eyes a queen more than an equal, and in his palace the only home he had ever known, one of whose centuries of command had bequeathed a tone and quality which men and women can inherit but not acquire.

"And when I return," Andre said at last, "shall I find at Versailles what I desire more than any other place?"

"What is it?" she asked innocently.

"Can you not guess? Have you forgotten, Ah, Denise, twelve months ago you promised—"

"No, no," she broke in, eagerly, "I shall not forget."

"There is only one thing that a poor Vicomte de Nerac, a soldier of France, desires—your heart, Denise, your love, Denise; the heart and the love of the most beautiful and noble woman in France, the heart of the Marquise de Beau Sejour. And Andre de Nerac loves the Marquise as he loves France. Can he say more?"

"I think not," she said, averting her eyes. "And the Marquise de Beau Sejour thanks the Vicomte de Nerac for his words and his homage—to France."

"Do not deny me, Denise," Andre said, "then go and do your duty as a noble and a soldier, and when peace and victory are ours, perhaps I—"

"I cannot wait till then. Have pity, Denise, have pity on the man who was your playmate, who loved you then and who loves you now. Remember, remember, I beg you, that over there in England the one thought that consoled my prisoner's life was the hope that when I returned to you—you would—"

"But, Andre, I cannot give you an answer, here, now—"

"Give it me then before I return to the war, or I may know whether I am to live in hope, or to die sword in hand and in despair."

"There is more than one marriage in the world," she said, quietly.

"Not for me," Denise looked at him, and he dropped his eyes, for he understood the calm reproach.

"Very well," she said, with decision, "I go to my home to-morrow. You shall have my answer in four days at the Chateau de la Seigneurie. You care enough to come and hear it."

"If he broke off, Ah, Denise!" he stretched out his passionate hand. "Hush! There is some one coming." A young man was galloping towards them, a boy in a simple dress, and he, too, was smiling. He had great blue eyes sparkling with the gayest, wickedest, most driving and lively. Removing his plumed hat with an airy sweep he kissed the lady's fingers, bowed low in the dust, and then, with a flourish, he said, "Marquise, the company and His Majesty await you."

His date-faded eyes were now turned to the face of his wife, and Andre, who had been smiling, now looked at her with a studied inebriation, but Andre gave him back the look, and smiled again his captivated smile.

Denise made haste to present the young man, "Monsieur le Chevalier de St. Amant, secretary to the King's Cabinet," she said, and her eyes pleaded for politeness from both.

"Monsieur le Chevalier, to the war?" the Chevalier asked, carelessly.

"As all true subjects of His Majesty ought to do," Andre retorted.

"Except," said the Chevalier, bowing to Denise, "those who find more pleasure pastime here at home."

"It is curious," Andre remarked, as if he had not heard, "that I who have known Versailles for ten years learn to-day for the first time of St. Amant."

"Ah," answered the Chevalier, laughing, "in this life, Vicomte, we are always learning. What I have learned is that the dull philosophers of whom we hear so much in Paris at present say soldiers learn nothing, and that is why they ought to go to the wars. I differ from them."

"I am not a soldier," Andre said, "but I am a man of letters. I have learned to-day that the soldiers teach what they have learned to the young men, and the schoolboys, which is very good for the schoolboys. But perhaps you, sir, do not like lessons?"

"No, sir, but my only regret at present is that I cannot stay now and have one at once. But Mademoiselle la Marquise will take care of me. I will learn, as we ride together, something that she alone can teach. Monsieur le Vicomte, to what will you wish to go to-morrow, and good-bye." He raised his plumed hat and galloped with the Denise.

The flush in Andre's cheek did not die out for some minutes. "Upstart! Puppy!" he continued to mutter, as his eyes glittered and his fingers twitched involuntarily on the handle of his sword. But his wife's eyes were suddenly dispelled in the most unexpected and agreeable way. Denise, who had been looking at him with a look of scorn, now looked at him with a look of love, and she said, "You are a man of letters, are you not?"

"Yes," he answered, "I am a man of letters."

"And well?"

"Perfectly. My wounds are healed. I am a prisoner no longer, and in a fortnight I return to the Low Countries to seek revenge from the enemies and yours, Denise, the English."

And Andre de Nerac loves the Marquise as he loves France. Can he say more?"

"I think not," she said, averting her eyes. "And the Marquise de Beau Sejour thanks the Vicomte de Nerac for his words and his homage—to France."

"Do not deny me, Denise," Andre said, "then go and do your duty as a noble and a soldier, and when peace and victory are ours, perhaps I—"

"What is it?" she asked innocently.

"Can you not guess? Have you forgotten, Ah, Denise, twelve months ago you promised—"

"No, no," she broke in, eagerly, "I shall not forget."

"There is only one thing that a poor Vicomte de Nerac, a soldier of France, desires—your heart, Denise, your love, Denise; the heart and the love of the most beautiful and noble woman in France, the heart of the Marquise de Beau Sejour. Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Gaetz, are expected home to-day.

Ilsey Brothers have secured the contract for heating the new school building.

Purdy is giving great bargain in furniture this month. Every four dollars is worth five dollars at his store.

The annual picnic of the Horn Hill people will be held on July 5th near the schoolhouse. A good time is guaranteed.

Harry Raikes, of Pine Lake, who has been in town for some days, was called to give evidence before the best commission at Innisfail yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Le Poidevin and family left for Vancouver on last Friday evening's train. Mr. Le Poidevin has secured a good position at the coast. His sale of furniture last Wednesday was most successful.

H. J. Snell of Ross Avenue has just fitted his shop with new lathe and the latest machinery for repairing watches and jewelry. Good work can be relied on and a trial will be sure to please.

M. J. Manning, Inspector of the Merchants Bank, was compelled to spend a short time in Vancouver hospital troubled with an attack of blood poisoning. We are pleased to learn he is able to resume his duties.

Messrs. Fred Anquetil and Arnold Brooks came in from their ranch, out west, last week and brought in a bunch of horses and realized a good price for them. They say the crops are looking fine in that part of the country.

A social will be held at Springvale church to-morrow, Thursday evening at 8 o'clock to extend greetings to Rev. F. W. Locke, the old time pastor and to enjoy an evening's social intercourse. Ice cream and other refreshments served.

Government land inspector, James Bannerman was in town over the holiday. He has been instructed to proceed north to the G. T. R. survey and will spend probably several months east of Edmonton, along the line of the new railway with a view to relieving the congestion caused by that part of the country settling up so fast.

R. C. Brumpton planted potatoes on the 24th day of May and they were up and in bloom on the 29th day of June, just 35 days after planting. If that can be beaten in Alberta, we want to know it. Mr. Brumpton is also experimenting with peanuts and is hopeful of growing a crop as he has several fine plants doing well. We will next be experimenting with bananas.

Will Panchot, goal keeper for the Horn Hill football team, did a plucky thing at the race track Monday. Mr. Ball fell from his sulky and Nellie Emmett was making a pretty fast clip around the track towards the crowd, and there might have been a serious accident, but Panchot ran out and by a quick dash managed to grab the lines and eventually stop the horse. Constable Johnston was also on the spot and assisted in getting the horse under control.

A. F. A. Meeting.

The adjourned meeting of the Red Deer branch of the Alberta Farmers' Association was held on Friday afternoon last.

President Cole explained that the meeting was called for the purpose of discussing the question of the pork packing industry.

Members present: Messrs. Bower, W. Reay, Wilson, Pengelly, Willson Bros, McKinnon, Metcalf, A. Trimble, Gummow, Leithhead, Green, G. A. Smith, Speirs, Plack, Ward, Richards, Bryan and the secretary.

Mr. Bower addressed the meeting regarding the price of pork. He read the following motion which he would introduce to the joint meeting of farmers from Penhold, Willowdale, and Red Deer:

"Whereas we believe this district of Central Alberta is equal to any place in the known world for successful mixed farming, especially cattle and hog raising, and whereas we believe that the production of hogs and cattle is restrained and the production of hogs being curtailed almost to the point of extermination because of the unjust treatment producers sustained at the hands of the dealers, said dealers being in a position to control prices and restrain competition among themselves, therefore be it resolved that we the members of the Red Deer, Penhold and Willowdale branches of the A. F. A. impress these facts upon the bee and pork commission on the occasion of their meeting at Red Deer and strongly recommend that the government give us redress and restore confidence among the producers by taking over the management and operating of co-operative pork packing and beef canning establishments."

Mr. Willson urged that unless the government back up the pork packing industry there would be no use to induce farmers to go into the scheme.

Mr. Ward felt sure the farmers would not go into the pork packing business under private management, but they would if under government supervision.

Mr. G. W. Smith said it would be difficult to induce the government to see the necessity of putting up packing plants when the price of pork was high. He thought we might present the matter to the government as strongly as possible. They took responsibility for creameries. They could do the same with packing plants. The government would need some guarantee by farmers to put up packing buildings and also furnish the hogs. Some discussion took place with regard to the by-product. It was thought by some of the members that there would not be so great a loss along those lines as some people claimed. Mr. Smith pointed out that some very green pork had been turned out by western packing houses in years gone by, which their firm could not sell, and they had been compelled to go back to the importer or export agent. He would not like to see that repeated.

The President spoke of Mr. Ward and himself going to meetings in the north country and understanding there seemed to be that the government intended to help the farmers out in some way with the pork packing industry.

Mr. Bower said it was the farmers' delegation that waited on Mr. Finley, the minister of agriculture a few months ago that got the government to include pork in the investigation before the commissioners. It was intended to have beef alone up to that time.

Three new members joined the association, namely G. W. Smith, Robt. Leithhead, and W. Bryan. Mr. Willson moved seconded by Mr. Speirs that the resolution introduced by Mr. Bower be adopted. Carried unanimously. G. W. Smith reported having a fine shorthorn bull calf for sale. Mr. Bower wants some Alberta Red fall wheat for seed. John Richards has some fine yorkshire pigs for sale. Mr. Bryan wants a tanworth boar.

Jas. Bower moved seconded by Willson that this association write to Mr. Beatty of the Imperial Oil Co., Calgary, protesting strongly against his company discriminating against farmers and thrashermen in not selling their gasoline direct to them. Carried unanimously. Meeting then adjourned.
